

In an age where the American public is increasingly left in the dark about divergent opinions on all matters of substantial importance to our culture, it is both unconscionable and foolish on the part of the government to further restrict information sources. It is, I think, time for the federal government to stop being pawns in the hands of multinational corporations. We can only lose by consolidating broadcast ownership further than it is already. I vigorously oppose any legislation that would do that, and will oppose any politician involved in making such a decision. Thank you.
